ATTRACTIONS AT THE THEATRES

Boston Theatres
Plymouth—The Irish Players.
Hollis St.—"The Red Rose."
Tremont—"Excuse Me." Park—"Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford."

Castle Square—"Forty-five minutes from Broadway."
Majestic—"The Gamblers." Next week—"The Round Up." Next week—"Miss Dudesack."
Colonial—"The Red Widow."

HOLLIS STREET
"The Red Rose," with Valeska Suratt, is again in Boston at the Hollis Street theatre. This three-act musical comedy has been given an elaborate setting, and the cast is in every way satisfactory.

TREMONT
The Pullman play, "Excuse Me," is still as popular as ever at the Tremont. This is the last week but one of its stay in Boston, and its run
there has been highly successful.

PARK
The third week of "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" began Monday at the Park theatre, with the capacity of the house taxed to accommodate the audience. This George M. Cohan comedy has made a great hit since it made its first appearance in Boston.

MAJESTIC
"The Gamblers" at the Majestic has aroused great interest among theatre-goers. The strong acting and complicated plot make the piece one which will be remembered by all who see it.

TREMONT
The musical comedy, "The Red Widow," in which Raymond Hitchcock is starring, is winning new friends at every performance. Full houses have been the rule of the past five weeks of the engagement, and this, the sixth, is proving to be no exception.

CASTLE SQUARE
"Forty-five Minutes from Broadway" is on its last week at Castle Square. The reception accorded the John Craig performance of this musical comedy has been a hearty one.
Next week the company will present
for the first time at Castle Square,
the well-known detective play, "Arsene Lupin, with Mr. Craig in the title role.

PLYMOUTH
Unless the management can succeed in prolonging their stay, the Irish Players, now appearing at the Plymouth theatre, will begin on next Monday the fourth and farewell week of their engagement at this new and beautiful playhouse. As a special feature, the management has chosen for the attraction for the entire week, "The Playboy of the Western World," a comedy in three acts, by the late J. M. Synge, one of the most noted of Irish playwrights.
The play is said to be the strongest of the list of plays written by this eminent author, and without question the most interesting of the entire repertoire presented by this wonderful organization.

NORTH ANDOVER
Excelsior lodge, Jr., I. O. G. T., met Saturday afternoon in the vestry
of the M. E. church.

tend a benefit social by Hope lodge hospital.

worth, N. H., has been visiting at Lone Oak farm, the residence of Mrs. A. A. Currier.

Alliance of the North Parish Unitarian church after the summer, took place Thursday of this week.

The M. E. vestry was the scene of a very enjoyable affair, Friday evening, when the members of the Ladies' Aid society tendered a reception to their husbands.

Friday evening the Ladies' Benevolent society conducted a successful harvest supper, sale and entertain-

A large assembly gathered in St.
Paul's church, North Andover, at 2:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon, when the funeral of William Byers of Newton Centre, who died suddenly last week, took place.

William G. Brooks and family are to return to Boston about the middle of the month, after passing the season at their summer home, the Phillips Manse, in the Centre.

The committee in charge of the coming bazar of the Eben Sutton engine company are to offer two prizes: a lady's gold watch to the lady turning in the largest sum of money, and a suit of clothes to the boy turning in the largest sum.

Seven Italians, who were arrested Sunday by officers Goff, Costello and Bumyca, for stealing fruit, vegetables and eggs, were arraigned on Monday morning before Judge N.
P. Frye in police court and were fined five dollars each.

It is safe to say that the success achieved by these remarkable players has never before been equalled in Boston. Their versatility and natural acting, depicting true Irish life, has captivated both the press and public of Boston, and as a mark of the latter's esteem and appreciation the players have been greeted with capacity audiences at every performance. Never in the history of the American stage has the theatre-going public of Boston been treated with such rare and artistic acting. If you have not witnessed this clever aggregation of wonderful players you should not miss this opportunity.
The company is booked for a brief tour of America and will not play in any other city in New England outside of Boston. Therefore if you are a lover of natural acting of plays tinged with an element of rich humor and tender pathos, you should not miss the opportunity of witnessing the Irish Players. They have caused a tremendous sensation in Boston.

The management of the Plymouth theatre is making a special feature of paying strict and immediate attention to mail orders. Prices range from 50 cents to $2.00.

BOSTON
Another Werba and Luescher success following on the heels of their unrivaled productions of "The Spring Maid" and "Little Miss Fix-
It" was the pleasing announcement flushed over the wires when this young firm of artistic managers secured "Miss Dudesack."

This European sensation, with its fascinating melodies played last year in nearly 200 continental cities, is the new opera selected for Miss Lulu Glaser's starring tour. Its charming title-role proved to be exactly what Miss Glaser had been seeking ever since her well-remembered triumph
in "Dolly Varden."

The American musical stage has not been graced by a more captivating or popular artist than Lulu Glaser. At all times an irresistible comedienne as well as a brilliant prima-donna, she dominates every role she has ever played. In "Miss Dudesack" her managers supplied her with a gorgeously tuneful work that ran a year in Berlin and Vienna and is now in demand at every stock opera house in Europe.

Its heroine is a saucy little orphan Scotch lassie who dances in kilts and whose witty tongue and youthful beauty are the envy of all the women of the McHumber clan of Highlanders. When she rides horseback with handsome Jack McHumber the clan is shocked, but when he dances
the seductive "Dudesack" love waltz with her there is consternation
among the McHumber ladies.

Betty Dudesack is a Scotch enchantress, and we can think of no one who could give the part as much grace and sparkle as Lulu Glaser.
Miss Glaser is supported by an all-star cast and an orchestra of thirty,
so that the presentation of "Miss Dudesack" promises one of those rare musical treats that come only occasionally during a season. The management calls attention to those ordering seats by mail, that the first two rows will not be for sale, being held out for the orchestra.

About 120 persons attended the first annual outing of the American Woolen club, composed of employees of the Washington, Wood, Ayer and Prospect mills, Saturday afternoon, at the A. B. C. camp on the Lowell road.

The "Border Light club," composed of well-known theatrical men of this city, was organized Sunday afternoon at a meeting held in the Prominent business and banking men of Lawrence and surrounding cities, to the number of about 200, availed themselves of the invitation of the Boston banking firm of Gove

ingham Park, Salem Depot, and enjoyed the hospitality of the above-named firm.

The first meeting of the season of the Lawrence Choral society was held in Russell hall Wednesday evening. The officers for the year were elected and plans of the coming work discussed. Rehearsals will commence Monday, October 16. Among the proposed works to be taken up are the "Messiah" and the "Creation."

Dr. Bowker's recent lecture on "Irish Ireland" at the Academy of Music, Brooklyn, drew such an audience that the managers transferred him to the great music hall in the same building. The vast audience waited with great good-nature for nearly an hour while the apparatus was being set up, and gave Dr. Bowker a great ovation when he finally appeared.

Sunday morning the 65th anniversary of Grace church was observed in a fitting manner, and in the evening the 15th anniversary of the date of the establishing of the vested choir was observed. The church was well filled on both occasions.
The musical program was under the direction of Dudley Warner Fitch, and the choir was assisted by Mrs.

Greensboro, N. C.—"For a long time I was so run down and debilitated that I could hardly drag around.
My appetite was poor and I could not sleep nights. I had tried different so-called tonics without benefit. I was advised to try your cod liver and iron tonic. Vinol, and I am so glad I did, for it gave me a hearty appetite, soon commenced to sleep soundly,
and I feel strong, well and more active than I have for years. Every run-just give Vinol a trial." K. Allsbrook.

What Vinol did for Mr. Allsbrook

PROBATE COURT

Essex, ss.
To the heirs-at-law, next of kin, and all other persons interested in the estate of Charlotte S. Abbot, otherwise known as Charlotte S. Abbott late of Andover, in said County, deceased.

Whereas, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said Court, for probate, by Walter Greenough who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to him, the executor therein named, without giving a surety on his official bond:

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Haverhill in said County of Essex, on the twenty-third day of October A.D. 1911, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, why the same should not be granted.

And said petitioner is hereby directed to give public notice thereof by publishing this citation once in each week, for three successive weeks, in the Andover Townsman a newspaper published in Andover
the last publication to be one day, at least,
before said Court, and by mailing, postpaid, or delivering a copy of this citation to all known persons interested in the estate, seven days at least before said Court.

Witness, Rollin E. Harmon, Esquire,
Judge of said Court, this second day of October in the year one thousand nine hundred and eleven.

J. T. MAHONEY, Register.

To the Honorable the Justices of the Superior Court within and for the County of Essex:

RESPECTFULLY I libel and represents Isabella McManemon of Andover in said county, that she was lawfully married to William J. McManemon now of Fort Fairfield, Maine at Andover on the tenth day of May A.D. 1904, and thereafter towards her libellant and the said William J. McManemon lived together as husband and wife in this commonwealth, to wit, at Andover in the County of Essex; that your libellant has always been faithful to her marriage vows and obligations, but the said William J. McManemon being wholly regardless of the same, at Andover on or about the ninth day of April
A.D. 1908 utterly deserted your libellant and said utter desertion has continued for three consecutive years next prior to the filing of this libel; and said libellee prior to said desertion, being of sufficient ability has grossly and wantonly and cruelly refused and neglected to provide suitable maintenance for your libellant.

Wherefore your libellant prays that a divorce from the bonds of matrimony may be decreed between your libellant and the said William J. McManemon; that she be allowed to resume her maiden name Isabella Murphy.

Dated this 25th day of September A.D.
1911.

ISABELLA McMANEMON.

FAIL TO APPEARNo Proof That Original Maine
Returns Were WrongPUBLIC HEARING NEXT STEPThose Interested For or Against Acceptance of Corrections Will Be Given Opportunity to Express Views —Allowance of Corrections Would Mean Overthrow of Majority of Twenty-Six For Repeal

Augusta, Me., Oct. 10.—The possibility of correction of the official figures of the state's vote of Sept. 11 on the question of the repeal of the constitutional prohibitory amendment rests entirely upon the ability of the town clerks of Athens, Limestone, Matinicus Island and Westfield, and other interested persons, to prove to the governor and council that their original returns were wrong, for yesterday marked the close of the period during which requests for corrections could be made and no other towns had been heard from.

The governor and council were in session to receive such requests, those of the four towns named having previously been made, but they were not forthcoming. The next step will be the holding of a public hearing, at which all persons interested for or against the acceptance of corrections will be given an opportunity to be heard.

The date of this hearing is expected to be announced shortly. After the hearing Governor Plaisted has until Dec. 1 to make his final announcement of the outcome of the election.

R. E. Philbrook, clerk of Matinicus plantation, who did not appear at the previous session of the council when the formal request for the correction of his returns was made, was examined at some length yesterday. His return to the governor and council gave the vote of the plantation as 36 for repeal and 2 against, but he maintained that it should have read just the reverse, 2 for repeal and 36 against.

He had with him the original notes which he took at the town meeting when the vote was announced and from which he later wrote the record of the election in the town's book. The record was also in evidence.

The applications for corrections have been filed at the instance, in a large measure, of the no license organizations, for the allowance of corrections by the governor and council would mean the overthrowing of the present majority of 26 votes for repeal, as indicated by the official returns, and the establishment of a substantial majority against repeal.

Decision Important to Maritime Nations and Plate Makers

Philadelphia, Oct. 12.—A decision of world-wide importance was handed down by the United States court of appeals when it dismissed four suits brought by the Krupp company of Germany against the Midvale Steel company of Philadelphia, to restrain the Philadelphia corporation from infringing upon patents for a process of manufacturing armor plate.

The decision sustains the opinion of the circuit court that the evidence produced before the lower court was "not sufficiently satisfactory, either in quality or amount," to establish infringement.

The appellate court goes a step further and declares that two certain claims in two of the Krupp patents are invalid and that, therefore, there could not be an infringement.

NOTICE

The following was written by the head of one of Boston's large furniture houses and its moral cannot be mistaken:

"The question is often asked, Where has that vast volume of business gone? the answer is, the firms that still continue in business are doing about $1,000,000 more business than they did twenty-five or thirty years ago. All the department stores, almost unknown in the housefurnishing business in those days, are not doing over $2,000,000. Also the wholesalers who retail do about $1,000,000. This still leaves about $16,000,000 lost to Boston. Where has it gone? Vanished like mist on the mountain side. The question is easily answered. It has gone to the splendid stores that have been established in the suburban cities and towns. The most alluring advertisements, published in the latest newspapers in the world, fail to bring back to Boston sixteen million dollars of business in the housefurnishing line; and in my opinion it will be more difficult in the future; if the dealers outside of Boston, continue to pursue their present aggressive policy, increase their splendid stocks of merchandise and continue to give their patrons value received. I believe that the people are becoming tired and sick of the old and threadbare ads marked down from $50.00 to $24.98. This method of advertising has been worked to death, and in time will in itself eliminate the best and most intelligent trade from Boston."

Yours truly,

Notable Anniversary

The celebration at the Old South Church marks an unusual occasion. Few institutions have worked out careers that cover a full century, and fewer have reached the two century mark.

The exercises of the week are sure to prove of deep interest to those who are particularly interested and also to many others in the town who will attend, but after all they will only tell in a sort of skimming-over fashion the work that has been accomplished in these two hundred years by this prominent Andover church. What the church is to a community is never quite sure until the church has proven itself by its work. Conferences and general meetings may resolve and propose plans of work and schemes of civic betterment and religious improvement ad libitum, but unless there is a constant growth along the lines proposed, worked out through persistent and consistent activity, the final result is of a doubtful sort.

The Old South Church has behind it two hundred years of service. Many notable men have contributed to the work making up that service. In the pastorate of that two hundred years, strong characters associated with all of the best life of Andover have labored and been interested. With those leaders have been many laymen whose names come at once to the old residents as making up a support for any institution bound to result in good work.

The town at large, irrespective of religious creeds and church affiliations, greets the Old South Church on this two hundredth birthday, with cordial congratulations. The church was never stronger in its actual achievement than it is now. Its mission was never more clearly set forth than it is at the present time. Upon an even keel always, it is still there today. The froth that marks so much of the present day reform preaching, has never been noted in the Old South preaching. A pastorate there has meant leadership in the community, has meant development of young and old into cleaner living and sweeter lives. Never did it mean more than at the present time. May the century marks continue to come for all time to this important factor in the religious, social, and civic life of Andover.

Hecklers and Hecklers

One of the Boston newspapers during the past week has announced that the "hecklers" were after the Republican candidates for state office. We don't like that word up here in Andover when they use it in the way that the newspapers have been using it in this particular incident, for it doesn't mean anything of the sort to those of us who have been used to hecklers here in Andover. We have a goodly number of "hecklers" here in town, but instead of being a disturbing force, they are one of the strongest influences in the town for many good things. It may not be known to some of our readers that the men at the flax mills who do some of the important work that is done down there are known as hecklers, and that their position on public questions have made of them a force to be reckoned with in the consideration of all important matters.

When one recalls the kind of citizens that they have always been in Andover, it is almost impossible to associate with the word anything of the nature of a disturber. We could therefore wish that the Democratic "isters" might appear before the people of this country under another name.

Possibly, unlike the rose, they wouldn't be so sweet (or in this case so disturbing) but at least they would be less of an offense to those of us who associate hecklers with good citizenship, fair play, and intense loyalty to American institutions.

Editorial Cinders

There is considerable evidence that the Republican campaign, which started off with a rush, is maintaining its pace very effectively. As is well known to those who are best acquainted with the candidates, no one has expected the candidate for Governor to become a Wendell Phillips, but it is gratifying to his friends to see that he has gained force and effect even in the two weeks that have elapsed since his nomination. He has gained this because he doesn't attempt to be a Wendell Phillips, but he does with sincerity and vigor, make statements that the public knows it can rely upon. This is the kind of campaigning that ought to succeed, after a year of insincerity such as we have had. His companions in the campaign may be in some cases stronger speakers than he is, but they can't score with the public as he can, for several of them have some inconsistencies to adjust in the light of some of the preliminary work which they did to secure their nominations. Because of this, the main stays in the present fight must be Messrs. Frothingham and Luce, and their cue must be the maintenance of the position of Massachusetts before the country as a defender of her own.

Wedding

SAUNDERS-KNIGHT

A quiet wedding took place on Tuesday evening of this week at the home of Rev. Charles Morgan of Bradford, when George W. Saunders, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Saunders of High street, was united in marriage to Miss Sarah Emma Knight of West Newbury, formerly of Haverhill. The couple were attended by Mrs. Anne S. Alley of this town, sister of the groom, and Charles Knight of West Newbury, brother of the bride. The double ring service was used.

After a short wedding trip, Mr. and Mrs. Saunders will take up their residence at 60 Plymouth road, Malden, where they will be at home to friends after January 1st.

Tournaments Begin Tomorrow

The inter-club tournaments in billiards and pool, which start tomorrow evening at the Andover club, have been arranged by the entertainment committee, and the interest shown in former years in the games will undoubtedly be continued through this winter.

The teams have been picked with great care and are considered to be very evenly matched, and the possibilities are that there will be some exciting games. The teams are as follows:

Billiards—Weeks and Cole, Brown and Lindsay, Chadwick and Clark, Lincoln and Hilton, Hardy and Flanders, Dane and Hill, Bodwell and Coutts, Harrington and MacDonald, Riddoch and Whitten, Sherman and Roggemann.

Pool—Clark and Hill, Riddoch and Flanders, Dane and MacDonald, Hardy and Lindsay, Harrington and Burns, Hilton and Warden, Roggemann and Whitten, Cole and Hitchcock, Bodwell and Coutts, Chadwick and Lincoln, Sherman and Goff.

Lamont's Team Won

The Smith & Dove Overseers and the Sons of Veterans were scheduled to bowl on Friday evening, but owing to the failure of the former to appear, a game was played between two picked up teams. The score:

LAMONT'S TEAM

Punchard Defeats Stoneham

The Punchard high school defeated Stoneham high on Brothers Field on Thursday afternoon by the score of 17 to 0, in a fast and well played game. Punchard was outweighted by Stoneham but was faster and played a better game. The touchdowns were made by E. Collins, who got the ball on a fumble and ran for a touchdown, and Petty, who scored in the same way. Stack scored the third touchdown on an end run. E. Collins kicked both goals. Punchard's goal was never in danger, the ball being kept in Stoneham's territory most of the time.

Tendered a Linen Shower

Miss Elizabeth Keery, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Keery of Harding street, was tendered a linen shower at the home of Miss Elizabeth Bruce, 20 Cuba street, this week, in honor of her approaching marriage to George Abbott, both popular young people of Andover. Miss Keery received many beautiful pieces of linen. The house was decorated with autumn leaves and potted plants. A dainty collation was served, the favors being in the form of colored autumn leaves with the name of each guest inscribed. The evening was pleasantly spent with music and singing, the company departing at a late hour. Those present were Misses Elizabeth Keery, Margaret Driscoll, Julia Hickey, Belle Bruce, Susan Keery, Mary Abbott, Helen Lowe, Marjorie Kydd, Mina Keery, Agnes Kydd, Elizabeth Stewart, Jennie Gordon, Sarah McGlynn, Mary Stewart, Belle Keery, Elizabeth Bruce.

Held Birthday Party

Miss Dorothy Elliott Evans, the 11 year old niece of Dr. and Mrs. George B. Elliott of Frye Village, entertained a large number of her little friends and older acquaintances as well, at her home this week in honor of her birthday.

During the afternoon, games were played and music and recitations enjoyed. At six o'clock refreshments were served in the attractively decorated dining room. The occasion was thus a very enjoyable one to hostess and guests. Miss Dorothy was the recipient of many birthday gifts.

Guests were present from Florida, New York City, Merrimac, Lawrence and Andover.

New Voters Registered

Six new voters registered at the meeting of the board of registrars last Friday evening. They were: H. Bartol Rooth, Chestnut street. Arthur N. Comeau, Salem street. Nicholas E. Murnane, Ballardvale. David M. Black, Essex street. Eugene L. Philbrick, Andover. Stewart Fraser, Shawshen road.

THE POSTAL SAVINGS BANK

Some of the Benefits in Service Now in Force at Local Post Office

The Postal Savings Bank, which was installed in the local postoffice in August, is working very satisfactorily both to those in charge of it, and to the public as well.

For the benefit of those who do not know some of the advantages of this system, the following information is given:

Object—The Postal Savings System is established for the purpose of providing facilities for depositing savings at interest with the security of the United States Government for repayment.

Safety—The faith of the United States is solemnly pledged to the payment of deposits made in postal savings depository offices with accrued interest as provided by the postal-savings act.

Who may deposit—Accounts may be opened and deposits made by any person of the age of 10 years or over in his or her own name and by a married woman in her own name and free from any interference or control by her husband. No person can have more than one account at any one time.

No person may open a postal savings account at any post office who is not a patron of that office.

All accounts must be opened by the depositor or his authorized representative. After opening an account a depositor may forward subsequent deposits to the post office by mail.

Deposits will be accepted only from individuals, and no account will be opened in the name of any corporation, association, society, firm, or partnership, or in the names of two or more persons jointly.

No account will be opened in the name of one person in trust for or on behalf of another person or persons.

Service free—The service of the Postal Savings System is free, and no charge or fee is collected or required in connection with the opening of an account or the withdrawal of money deposited.

Deposits—Deposits are evidenced by postal-savings certificates issued in fixed denominations of $1, $2, $5, $10, $20, $50, and $100, each bearing the name of the depositor, the number of his account, the date of issue, the name of the depository office, and the date on which interest begins. The postmaster or his representative will make out a duplicate of each certificate issued, which the depositor will be required to sign and which the postmaster will retain in his records.

No account will be opened for less than $1, nor will fractions of a dollar be accepted for deposit.

Interest—Interest will be allowed on all deposits at the rate of a percent per annum, computed on each savings certificate separately, and payable annually. No interest will be paid on money which remains on deposit for a fraction of a year only.

Death of depositor.—In case of the death of a depositor the amount standing to his credit will be paid to the executor or administrator of his estate upon compliance with the necessary requirements. In case no formal administration is desired by his relatives, the postmaster may, if it is deemed proper, be authorized to pay the amount of the deposit, on application in proper form, to the persons entitled to receive it, without the appointment of an administrator.

Account of woman who marries.—A woman who opens an account and afterwards marries must present her savings certificates at her office in order that the certificate may be indorsed as payable to her in her new name. The postmaster will receive no further deposits from a depositor failing to comply with this requirement, nor will he make any partial or interest payment to her.

Abbot Academy Notes

The classes in French conversation began last week under a new instructor, Mlle. Léontine Galée of Paris. Miss Helen G. Pratt, a graduate of Mt. Holyoke college in the class of 1910, will have the supervision of the day scholars' room in McKean Hall. She will live in Draper Hall.

The school had as guests Wednesday, Dr. Samuel V. Cole, the principal of Wheaton Seminary, and Miss Everett, a teacher in the same school.

Miss Delia Hamble of Lawrence won in the finals of the tennis tournament which was played Wednesday.

Tuesday evening the Seniors had a picnic supper at Haggett's pond.

Rev. Frederic Palmer will speak tomorrow at the evening meeting.

Ground has been broken for the new laundry and engine-house back of Draper Hall. The plans show that it will be as perfect a building of its kind as modern skill can make it.

visit the Historical Exhibit

The loan exhibit of rare and antique articles which have been collected by the Andover Historical society can be seen this evening and tomorrow afternoon and evening in the lower town hall. Owing to the fact that so many residents of the town are the possessors of old relics which are of great interest, any collection shown by the society could not but be worth seeing. But this particular collection should be visited by everybody, for several unexpected treasures have been brought to light and are now on exhibition.

Caught Thieves at Foster's Pond.

The frequent cases of thieving which have been reported during the past few months at Foster's Pond, received what may be a slight check last Sunday, when Chief Mears and Special Officer Leonard Saunders arrested a man and woman, who had been stealing cabbages. The police were notified by the owners of the cabbages, and the former had little difficulty in finding the culprits. At a hearing held on Monday morning, each was fined $5.

Two men who were arrested on Saturday night, one on the street and the other in a trolley, were brought into court also. One was fined $5, the case of the other was continued three weeks.

Observed Eighty-second Birthday

John B. Jenkins of Scotland District observed his eighty-second birthday last Saturday. During the day Mr. Jenkins, who is one of the oldest and best known residents of the town, received many calls and congratulations of many of his friends.

Among those who visited him was a delegation from the Woman's Relief Corps, which presented him with a large bouquet of carnations. He received many other gifts as well, not only from his comrades of the G. A. R., but from other friends also. Notwithstanding his years, Mr. Jenkins enjoys excellent health, and is keenly interested in everything pertaining to Andover.

200 YEARS OF CHRISTIAN LABOR

Notable Celebration at the South Church, Marking the Two Hundredth Anniversary of the Founding of the Church

Rev. J. J. Blair, 1884-'92

ANNIVERSARY HYMN

Extol this church of Jesus,
This temple of our Lord,
Where we, in prayer and anthem,
Unite to worship God,
Two hundred years our fathers,
Mid life's perplexing maze,
Have made this church re-echo,
With their assured praise.

Her creed was writ in heaven,
The angels chant it there;
Her name is set in jewels
Of wondrous lustre rare;
Her altar flames were kindled
By power from above;
Her heart was warmed and tended
By Christ's great dying love.

Rev. John L. Taylor, 1839-'53

THE CELEBRATION

The first of the exercises in commemoration of the two hundredth anniversary of the South church took place yesterday afternoon and evening in the church building, with a large and interested audience in attendance, composed of townspeople and many former residents of the town, and people who have at various times been connected with the church.

The auditorium was simply but very effectively decorated in honor of the day with autumn foliage and evergreen, while the vestries were also transformed by means of bunting and flowers.

AFTERNOON EXERCISES

The afternoon exercises began at 2.30, and opened with singing and Scripture reading. The latter was read by Rev. Arthur G. Cummings of Middleboro, a former resident of Andover. Prayer was then offered by Rev. Charles C. Torrey, senior deacon of the church. After another hymn and the Doxology, and a few words of welcome by the pastor, a paper was read by Frank T. Carlton. It contained many and varied reminiscences of the church in bygone days and was made up of the combined memories of Miss Mary A. Ballard, Mrs. Chas. C. Blunt, Miss Emily Carter, Miss Ellen G. Ellis, Ballard Holt, Mrs. Mary E. Ripley, and Miss Hannah E. Whittier.

The next speaker was E. Kendall Jenkins, for thirty years clerk of the parish. In spite of the fact that Mr. Jenkins will observe on Saturday his eightieth birthday, he is still an enthusiastic and exceedingly active member of the church and an entertaining speaker. His remarks consisted of a series of interesting reminiscences. He described his first impressions of the South church, when he, together with his father and mother, brothers and sisters, attended divine service there every Sunday, covering the distance of four miles in an old-fashioned two-wheeled chaise. He told of the old New England Sunday, with its long services in which the minister preached invariably on the same subject—the wrath of God; of the noon hour, when the lunch, brought from home, was eaten; of the period after dinner when the grey-haired members of the church gathered and discussed predestination, free moral agency and kindred subjects; of the afternoon service, and of the final going home. He gave a description of the church building as it was at that time, with its bass viol and its little organ. He then spoke of the change which has come over the church and its doctrines since the days of his childhood, and of the old-time features that are now no more.

Rev. James H. Laird, 1877-'83

She's nursed the first fond feelings
That burned within the breast,
And guided youthful footsteps
With word, reproof, behest,
She's sheltered weak and homeless,
Who feared the storm and blast,
And kept their faith from failing
Until the danger passed.

The Church has fought her battles,
Beset by doubts and fears,
And yet the morn of glory
Supplants her night of tears.
For her are notes of conquest,
The arch of triumph bold;
To her are victor's laurels,
A diadem of gold.

WORDS FROM OLD PARISHIONERS

The following reminiscences by several old parishioners were contained in the paper read by Mr. Carlton at the afternoon program.

The Old South Meeting House stood much where the present church does, but at right angles with it. It was a bare and barn-like building with two rows of windows on each side. The principal entrance was on the west, next to Mrs. Joseph Smith's. There was a vestibule below the belfry and steeple. In this vestibule was a box into which church notices were dropped, to be collected by the minister before he went into the pulpit. At the other end of the meeting house was a small porch. A glass case was fastened against its walls, and in this glass case "marriage intentions" were tacked up. Inside the building, the heat, what there was of it, was supplied by two furnaces. A long black pipe ran the length of the building on either side. Wherever there were joints in the pipes, drip cups were placed on the floor below to catch the drippings. Galleries extended on three sides. The boys and some girls gravitated toward the side galleries, and, if they could, to the back gallery. They were not always as orderly as seemed good to Uncle Moses Holt, the tithing man. Children sitting on crickets in the pews below could watch Uncle Moses as he stole along the gallery walls in his slippers, and they sometimes saw him catch his lawful prey when an unwary boy would get a clip on his ear from the slipper which Uncle Moses had deftly snatched off. The choir sat in the rear gallery, backed by a small organ. For many years good Deacon and Mrs. Albert Abbott led the singing. One former member of the choir says that "they did the singing and the rest of us had a good time." But Mr. Edward Carter's fine, rich voice was often heard in solos, and always with pleasure. The "funeral quartet" of the time was composed of Deacon and Mrs. Abbott, the Deacon's brother, William Abbott, or "Bill" Abbott, as he was better known, and Miss Abbie Carter. Abbie Carter was blind. She stood next to Mrs. Abbott, who, during the interludes of the hymns, would read the next stanza to Miss Carter in a voice which sometimes grew so loud and excited that it drowned the interlude. Edward Carter was a noble man, and also a humorous one. The preparatory lecture once fell upon a hot Fourth of July evening. Mr. Carter attended, and when he got home remarked, "I shall not go to the preparatory lecture again on the Fourth of July."

Pomona Grange Meeting

The October meeting of the Essex County Pomona Grange was held last week at Newburyport in Quasacacuen hall. There was a large attendance of delegates from various granges, 115 in all. Two delegates went from Andover Grange. They were, Ralph A. Bailey and Edward W. Boutwell.

The reports of the various subordinate granges showed them to be in a very prosperous condition.

The principal discussion of the morning was relative to the proposed formation of another Pomona grange in the southern section of Essex County. The matter was discussed very thoroughly and a committee chosen consisting of Past Masters Edw. W. Boutwell of Andover, Joseph W. Andrews of West Gloucester, Ellius A. Emerson of Haverhill, Edward A. H. Grover of Danvers and Fred W. Chase of Newbury to hear and consider the expression of the granges in the matter in order that the most perfect amicable relations might exist in the formation proposed with satisfaction to all concerned and to report at the next meeting.

At the afternoon session several interesting discussions took place. Past Master Edward W. Boutwell of this town gave an interesting account of his trip to Bermuda last year. Ralph A. Bailey, Master of the local Grange, spoke on the subject, "Should the Farmer Take a Vacation, and When?"

At the close of the day it was voted to hold the November meeting with the North Andover Grange.

I. O. G. T. Notes

T.; James Turner, F. S.; Geo. Keith, treasurer; A. Lundgren, secretary; Lottie Grant, register; Sister Guthrie, pianist.

The great event of the evening was the spelling-bee, which resulted as follows: Sister Grant, first prize; Roscoe Cole, second; Susie Libby, third; J. Turner, fourth; C. Murphy, fifth.

The next meeting of the lodge will be an open meeting. Some good talent has been provided and everything points to a very successful meeting. Come and bring a friend with you; seats free. Remember the date, Tuesday, October 24.

The pride of Andover Juvenile lodge had a very successful meeting in the A. O. U. W. hall, Tuesday evening. Two candidates were initiated and two reports in for the next meeting. After the meeting, games were played, including a peanut race, which was enjoyed by all. The juveniles and their parents are invited to the open night of the adult lodge, to be held in A. O. U. W. hall Tuesday, October 24. A good program is all ready for that night.

CHURCH REMINISCENCES

The Lord has struck me by lightning." It was true, there had been a thunder shower, and he had sustained a slight shock.

Miss Mary Ballard is the oldest living member of the choir. Miss Emily Carter and Miss Hannah Whittier are others. Miss Cummings, who married Dr. Drinkwater, is the first organist remembered. Other singers were David Hidden, Daniel P. Abbott, Hartwell Abbott, Sylvester Abbott, M. C. Andrews. Miss Margaret Blanchard was the next organist. The hymn book used at that time was Watts' and Select. There were no tunes in the books; so the choir had a book with tunes made ready for any hymn—long metre, short metre, common metre, particular metre, hallulujah metre and others. During the last hymn the congregation turned around and faced the singers.

The children in the congregation were much like children now. There were more of them. Those were the days of large families; days of strict church-going; and days in which it was not esteemed a hardship to get to meeting at half past ten. Every Sunday morning a long procession of vehicles wended its way down School street, and every Sunday afternoon the same procession wended its way back. The Dean Holt family, with its small army of children, was always there from Prospect Hill. One wonders how their mother managed to get them all ready, but she did.

The children sat through the service by means of the usual expedients. The pulpit alcove was bordered by a large number of wooden clovers or trefoils, and one diversion of restless children was to count the clovers. One child had a pleasant neighbor in Mrs. Nathan Clark. Mr. Clark was the last man in the church to wear a queue. Mrs. Clark would lean over and bestow a lozenge on her small neighbor. The mother would then produce a pin, and the little girl spent her time making holes in the lozenge with her pin until it broke. Then she ate it. It was also possible in those days, as in these, to spend time observing the fashions. The Higgins girls (of whom the late Mrs. Bartlett was the last) introduced plush bonnets into Andover. Our oldest choir singer went home from meeting that day to tease her father for a plush bonnet. She got it. The great day of the year was the day of the Seminary graduation. It was held in the South Meeting House in August. A platform was built up before the pulpit upon which the graduates spoke their pieces, and the old church was filled. Hosiote neighbors, like the Aikens, delegated their children to watch for old friends, if any were present, and to bring them home for refreshments of cake and some cooling drink. The exercises were long and dry, and the children enjoyed the duty, while the old friends enjoyed the summons to the nearby house.

The Sunday School was held in the meeting house. The vestry, a little black house standing next the entrance to the churchyard, but to the right, was not nearly large enough for that overflowing school. The meeting house was not an ideal place for Sunday School. The teachers must twist their necks or must stand in a pew in front, to see their pupils over the tall pew backs. Deacon Abraham Gould and Deacon Albert Abbott are remembered as superintendents. Dear, good men, loved and respected by every one, young and old. Miss Octavia Wardwell is gratefully remembered among the teachers. As the scholars grew older, they were turned over to theologues for instruction, and here they met with varied experiences. A Welshman is remembered among these theologues. His class met in the singing seats, and studied the book of Job. The Welshman discoursed to his young hearers in a manner that required the freedom and space of the gallery. He took time, however, to fall in love with one of his class, who refused him. A different theologian was a very tall, dark, handsome man with a close fitting coat and long fawn-colored trousers. He was from New York City, and his elegance of attire made a lasting impression upon his little company of plainly dressed country folk. Not all the theologues, however, are remembered for their oddities. Rev. Frank Perkins is gratefully remembered for his faithful teaching. Deacon John Aiken taught a Bible class. He had moved here from Lowell, and a Lowell friend had said of him, "John Aiken has gone to the place that would suit him best, next to heaven." He is remembered now, bending over his Greek testament.

After Sunday School came lunch time. There was no well near the vestry, and the company had to disperse to get drinking water. A favorite resort was the well whose closed in remains may still be seen under the shrubs beyond Mr. George Abbott's house on Central street.

Afternoon service was held at half past one, later at two o'clock, and then the day was over, except that people living nearby gathered again for a prayer meeting in the evening. It had been a long, dull day, but dignified and reverent, and, as honey came out of the lion, so sweetness came out of its strength. Sometimes the wetness was in the church, and sometimes not, but it appeared somewhere. The children found it in the rest and peace of the God-given New England Sabbath. Sometimes they walked three long miles from Holt District and Scotland District, but it was easily a pleasant walk through the bright spring sunshine, amid the song of birds and the blossoming wayside flowers. When they reached the meeting house, it was pleasant to go inside and join in that dear old hymn beginning

Welcome, delightful morn,
"Thou day of sacred rest;"
and the heart blesses that memory now.

Dr. Badger is the first minister remembered. He is remembered for three things: his handsome face; the velvet collar of his overcoat (then called top coat), and for his twin baby boys. The velvet collar was criticised as too showy for a minister. After Mr. Langstroth's brief pastorate of three years, came Rev. John L. Taylor. The Taylors were cordial and lovable people, and entertained their parishioners a great deal at tea parties.

There were social gatherings beside Mrs. Taylor's tea-parties. Who that was blessed to attend them can forget the socials of the Sewing Society at Mr. James Abbott's. Dea. Albert's, Capt. Job Abbott's, the Ballard's, and Joseph Holt's! People owned their own teams then, and went, no matter how far. It created a mild sensation when Mrs. Amos Abbott was extravagant enough to hire the railroad carriage, with its great round body hung on leather straps, to go out to Capt. Job's.

If one was looking for entertainment, the weekly prayer meetings sometimes furnished it. Men spoke more easily than they do now. Older members of the church will remember Mr. Easton, and his frequent description of Phillips Academy boys. With stinging accents he would exclaim "That generation of vipers!" He had a chance to know them; for his house and shop were at the top of School street.

Dr. Taylor was followed by Rev. George Moor; a shy man but strong, and a very earnest, forceful preacher. One Thanksgiving Day, or was it Fast Day? he preached from the text, "For He loveth our nation, and hath built us a synagogue." That sermon sealed the fate of the old meeting house. The new one was built in wonderfully quick time, and was occupied early in 1861. Mr. Ballard Holt made the south part of the pulpit, while George F. Tilton built the north part. It was handsome then, and is handsome now; but it could not be the same as its predecessor to one here today, who remembers a day in earliest childhood, when hand-in-hand with her mother, she walked down the long aisle of the old meeting house, and stood before the high pulpit, from whence the minister came down the winding stair, and in a very solemn, tender way baptized her, and a little brother and sister standing beside her. The costliest new pulpit could not give that memory!

Deacon Albert Abbott had said that he should resign his long leadership of the choir when the new church was done. He kept his word, and a new leader appeared who soon made it clear that he wanted a new choir. The old members resigned in displeasure, but it was generally understood that the new choir would furnish something fine in the way of singing. The first day came, and the minister gave out the first hymn. The leader searched his tune book for a fitting tune, and hit upon one with the wrong metre. The result was confusion for the choir, but pleasure for the ex-members seated down stairs.

A few weeks later the noise of that little choir squabble was drowned in the thunders of Civil War. The mistake of singing a wrong tune was forgotten in the disaster of Bull Run. The New South Meeting House stood face to face with a New Age.

CHURCH CELEBRATION

The next speaker was Gen. Wm. A. Aiken, of Norwich, Conn., an old resident of the town, and son of Deacon Aiken, so well beloved by people of the South church. His address was also of a reminiscent nature. He recounted his first coming to Andover with his parents when a child, and of his early connections with the church. He mentioned his recollections of the anniversary services, and the long sermons which were delivered on those occasions. He also recalled several of the old members of the church, Deacon Gould, Deacon Albert Abbot, Deacon Amos Abbot, Hartwell and Timothy Abbot and others, the midweek meetings in the little building on the hill back of the meeting house, and the ministers whom he had known.

George Gould of Wellesley, another well-known former resident of Andover, was the next speaker. In a very interesting manner he related his early connections with the church during his childhood, and later from 1874 to 1895, during his residence here before removing to Wellesley. He gave several interesting descriptions of the old meeting house, of the horse-sheds, of the two sextons, one of whom, Peter French, exercised such a guardianship over the boys in the congregation; the singing on Sunday, and his own efforts in pumping the organ, and lastly his period of clerkship in the church, and the steady, useful work which went quietly on year after year.

The next number on the program was the presentation of one of the three tablets which have been given to the church. This was in honor of the first three pastors, Rev. Samuel Phillips, pastor for 61 years; Rev. Jonathan French, pastor for 37 years, and Rev. Justin Edwards. The tablet is placed on the wall on the south side of the church, and is a distinct addition to its memorials.

The formal presentation of the tablet was made by Hon. Josiah Quincy of Boston, a descendant of Rev. Samuel Phillips. He spoke of the rare lives of service of the three ministers; their work in the community both from the spiritual standpoint and from the practical everyday standpoint; their leadership in various spheres of activity. He said that due credit should be given to Rev. Mr. Phillips for the noble work in educational lines performed by his sons, since they were undoubtedly strengthened in their nobility of character and purpose by the teaching of their father, and that it is fitting that a permanent memorial be placed in the church so that future generations may be led to a further study of the lives of these three men.

David Shaw, in behalf of the parish, with a few appropriate remarks, accepted the gift of the tablet.

The last speaker of the afternoon was Rev. James H. Laird of Hinsdale, pastor of the South church from 1877 to 1883. His address was concerned chiefly to his own experiences here during his pastorate, of the religious work that went on during those years, and his great enjoyment in his work.

With his address, followed by another hymn and the benediction, pronounced by Rev. C. C. Carpenter, the delightful afternoon of reminiscences came to a close.

Still not quite to a close, for after the exercises all adjourned to the vestry below, where sandwiches, coffee and cake were served by several young ladies of the Sunday school, under the efficient guidance of the luncheon committee. The interlude between the afternoon and evening services was thus passed in sociability. Many old friends were brought together, some after many years of separation.

The historical exhibit of antiques connected with the church and its members was also fully appreciated during this hour. The extent of the collection and the variety of articles displayed was surprising. Among the many curiosities were old hymn-books, pamphlets, sermons, relics of the former meeting houses, old portraits, daguerreotypes, several old-time samplers, foot stoves, old chairs, the old Bible used in the pulpit, a little bedstead made from wood taken from one of the old meeting houses, musical instruments and many other articles too numerous to mention. The exhibit was certainly a notable one and one of which the church may be justly proud.

EVENING EXERCISES

The evening services began at 7:00 o'clock with Judge Charles U. Bell presiding. The opening hymn which was sung was one written especially for the occasion by Reginald F. Chutter of Locke street. The entire hymn is given below.

Rev. Edward E. Bradley of Lincoln then led in prayer. He was followed by George S. Minor, clerk of the parish, who gave a statement concerning the historical tablet which has been purchased by members of the congregation and which has been placed in the vestibule of the church on the wall between the two center doors. Mr. Minor's address contained many interesting statistics concerning the history of the church. The first meeting house was built in 1709, the church being organized two years later, October 17, 1711. Previous to that time the entire town had attended services at the church in the north parish, or what is now North Andover. The funds for the first church were raised by taxation. In 1734 the second meeting house was built; the third was erected in 1788. In 1860, by voluntary subscriptions amounting to $15,000, the present church was built.

John V. Holt, chairman of the assessors, next made a statement regarding the tablet in memory of Rev. George Moosar, D.D., given by his daughters. Dr. Moosar was pastor of the church from 1855 to 1861. He was born in 1830, was graduated from Phillips Andover and later from Williams college, and was ordained in Andover at the age of 25. After leaving his work here, he had two pastorates in Oakland, California and was also professor of theology in the Pacific Theological Seminary, which chair he occupied at the time of his death. The tablet in his memory has been placed on the south wall of the church auditorium.

An appreciation of Dr. Moosar and his life work, written by one of his pupils, Rev. James C. Dorward of Jewett, N. Y., was read by Mr. Shipman. It was as follows:

TRIBUTE TO DR. MOOSAR

It is with much pleasure that I offer my tribute of praise to the memory of Dr. Moosar, once your pastor and for three years your teacher in theology. When I knew Dr. Moosar he was both professor and pastor in Oakland, California. He was professor of Systematic Theology in the Pacific Theological Seminary and pastor of the Plymouth Avenue Congregational church. He was justly esteemed both in the parish and in the seminary. Everybody loved Dr. Moosar. His was a peculiarly gentle and kindly spirit. He was always the same, never apparently in haste, but always ready to lay down his work, whatever it might be, with rare courtesy and self-forgetfulness, to comfort, advise, and help another.

As a teacher I greatly admired him. His lectures were clear and comprehensive and thoroughly orthodox. He kept himself in close touch with the thought and life of the times and set clearly before the students the various trends of thought, but it was never in the spirit of harsh or unfriendly criticism. I cannot imagine that in Dr. Moosar. Even when referring to teachings of which he could not approve, it was done kindly and in the same gentle spirit which characterized all his actions.

He was one of the few men who seem to be able to win and to hold the love and loyalty of all with whom they come in contact in any intimate way. And I think it was just so in the church of which he was pastor. The people were justly proud of their pastor, and always knew what they might expect. The preaching was never sensational, but it was always solidly good, and the language choice, showing thorough and careful preparation.

I think of Dr. Moosar now with reverential love. Though he is no longer with us he yet speaketh and will continue to speak for years to come through the many who have profited by his ministry.

I am glad that a tablet in his name is being placed in the South Church, Andover—that East and West have a share in his memory.

Professor John Phelps Taylor was one of the interesting speakers of the day. In his usual delightful manner he recounted various anecdotes and memories connected with his early life, his father, and his parsonage home, his recollections of the various pastors of the church, Dr. Badger, Rev. Mr. Edwards and Rev. Charles Smith. His reminiscences, filled as they were with the very spirit of the past and the people of the past, were indeed an enjoyable addition to the program.

The following interesting and characteristic paper, entitled "What the South Church Means to Me," was then read by Miss Mary Alice Abbot.

MISS ABBOT'S PAPER

"I love thy Church, O Lord! And why should I not?"

My ancestry constrains me! Mr. Shipman told us at the last annual meeting that of the thirty-five men and women who founded the South Church, seven were Abbots. You may like to hear their names again: Dea. John Abbot, George Abbot (clerk), Nehemiah Abbot (treasurer), Sarah (Barker) Abbot, Dorcas (Graves) Abbot, and Mrs. Benjamin Abbot.

It is interesting to note that of the original thirty-five, fourteen were men and twenty-one women; so in the earlier days of our Church there were one fifth more women than men against (I believe) one third more women today.

When the "Men and Religion Movement" is done, or rather begun, let us hope that the Church "may come into its own," with all men and women bearing worthily the name Christ gave his disciples, "Friends of Christ."

My grandfather owned three pews in the old church, and even there with him and my grandmother, their eight boys and girls, and the numerous relations who from time to time called that hospitable house their home, they could hardly obey the Bible injunction to "entertain strangers" in their pew. My grandfather sold a pair of fat oxen to a Mr. Trow, a butcher of the town, and an attendant of the Episcopal Church, and took in payment a pew in the Episcopal Church. Later, when Mr. Nathan Frye wished to become an Episcopalian, they exchanged pews. I might say right here that my grandfather owned at one time also a pew in the West Church, and one in the Free Church, so I think that he must be exonerated from the charge of narrowness which has been brought against some people of his day and generation. My father, as did some of your fathers, paid three hundred dollars for his pew in this church. He also paid one hundred dollars for the second horseshed in the row which used to stand at the left of the church. Would church pews and horsesheds be considered profitable investments nowadays? Even our horses had a horror of being late to meeting! Many a time has my father sprinted up River Hill in his shirt sleeves after Old Major, who brought to the door and left unhitched while my father finished his church toilet, stood there quietly enough, save if he was thirsty going by himself to the brook for a drink, but if perchance the bell began to ring before the family arrived, he set off by himself and then followed the game of "Catch who catch can"—even on the Sabbath day! Dear old Major!

whose rumbling stomach announced even when they were afar off down Central street that the Hartwell Abbots were on the way to the sanctuary.

There is an adage, "Satan finds some mischief still for idle hands to do," and one of the earliest devices for keeping me out of mischief Sunday morning was this. I was given my father's silk hat to polish with a bandanna handkerchief. I have forgotten how my father looked with a "stove pipe" topping his tall form, but I remember the hat. It was my chief delight to rub the nap the wrong way, making it look as badly as I could, and then to see what I could do by way of transformation.

Those Sunday afternoons before the open fire when my father taking one of us upon his knee (imagine it!) lined out from the oblong hymn book some of those old fugue tunes and we listened with awe.

I well remember the first time as a child that I sat beside my mother at the Communion Table. When the bread was passed, I sat up eagerly thinking what a nice service it was to have something to eat, and put out my hand to help myself only to have it withdrawn by my mother. I cuddled down beside her dejectedly, thinking rather hard thoughts about the church that fed the older people and let the little children go hungry. Are we in danger of doing just that thing today? I think not in this church while we have Mr. Shipman for our pastor.

I must not forget to mention my first pair of kid gloves bought by my mother in Lowell on Saturday, and worn in all their glory to church the following day. I do not remember that the choir sang "Hardly knew you!" "Hardly knew you!" but the Academy girls of that day never fail to remind me of my first pair of kid gloves, orange in color.

It was about that time that I used to while the long church hours away by resting my head on the back of pew 76, and studying the design of the stucco work on the ceiling around the chandelier. It was changed when the church was refrescoed, but at that time there were oval raised figures which to my childish imagination resembled eggs, with an especially large one right over my head, and I spent much time wondering what would happen if it came down, splash, into my face.

If you remember, Mr. Smith had a habit of saying "Again, again, we see that," etc., and I as a child was always wondering why he didn't say the same thing over.

These were the days when it seemed to me the best policy not to walk home after Sunday School with my Aunt Phebe, for she always asked me what the text was and where it was, and I was always found "wanting." Dear Aunt Phebe, whose patience was well-nigh inexhaustible with her nieces and nephews. I remember sitting with her one Sunday in pew 91. She removed her black kid glove and I tried it on a hand much smaller than it is now and peered through the wrinkled fingers at my bosom friend, Emma Barnard, who sat a few seats behind, with the result that she snickered and I snickered. I was turned around rather forcibly, the offending glove was put out of my reach on the other side of my aunt, and I was made to look at the minister good and hard for the rest of the service.

Miss Mary Hidden, who sat behind us with her brother and the renowned Joseph Nesima, when he was a member of the Seminary, several times offered to give me a Bible when I had finished reading it through. I never had a Bible of my very own till I bought one for myself in 1888. The reason is self-evident.

Memory's pictures of the Sunday School bring back my mother and my Aunt Phebe in the ladies' class in the corner with Mrs. Sylvester Abbott, Mrs. John Manning, Mrs. Shearer, Miss Abby Richardson and others, and my father in the class of men whose place was in the folding doorway between the prayer meeting room and the primary room and whose teacher was first Dea. Aiken and later Squire Buck. I had quite often to go in that direction for forgotten contribution.

I see myself a restless, wriggling youngster, plastic as the potter's clay in the hands of some teachers, and as flint in those of others.

The first teacher whom I remember is Miss Lizzie Swift. We had Mrs. Ripley for a brief time, but she chose a class of boys in preference to us. I have never quite forgiven her, but in time I may attain! Mrs. Mason, Mrs. Anna Richards, Mrs. Bowers, Mr. Frank Andrews, and several theologues, who then were important factors in our school—all had a chance to exercise the gift of Moses.

I remember the Christmas celebrations with their Santa Claus. The Christmas when my best friend received a jack-knife and I got a paper-knife, when I would much rather have had the jack-knife, so I have never been very enthusiastic about picking out ten cent gifts for the pupils of the Sunday School.

You recall the Sunday School concerts, when we were on the anxious seat till our part was well over, much as we are today! And the prayer meeting when the embarrassed leader gave out by mistake as the first hymn, "Lord, dismiss us with thy blessing."

I must pay tribute to my class of boys, whom I took in 1880, on my graduation from Andover, whom I kept for sixteen years, and whose ownership I almost disputed with their fathers and mothers. The thirteen original members of the class, ranging from ten to fourteen years old, were Henry Barnard, Fred Berry, Joseph and Charles Blunt, Isaac Clark, Homer Foster, Stuart Jenkins, Will Johnson, Harry Noyes, Will Mears, Willis Russell, Oscar and John Timlin. They are my "first love" in the Sunday School world, and I have to thank them for the lessons they taught me.

I have always enjoyed the Wednesday evening meetings. They have never seemed dull to me, but always helpful. From the time I used to dare Miss Sarah Carlton to say verse in meeting, and her reply always, "I will if you will," in spite of the fact that the ladies of her generation said that it was harder for them to speak in public for they were not trained to it as we were. Many of us remember the prayer meeting on the afternoon of Fast Day. My father always had something to say at that meeting, although he seldom took part except by presence, in the regular prayer meeting. He once said that at the close of the meeting where he made his first attempt at speaking, a deacon took him by the hand and said, "Short as a sheep's tail!" No doubt the criticism was well meant, but it proved a damper to one, who if he spoke at all, must be brief and pointed.

The other Sunday morning, I was strangely stirred to see walk into the church and take her seat in the old family pew, a former organist of this church. For the moment I could not tell whether she was the singer of the family or the organist, whether she was married or unmarried, but it did me good to see her there. Immediately, the church was peopled with the old-time occupants of the pews. I saw before me Mrs. James Means and her family, Dea. Albert's family—I sat once more in the quiet afternoon communion service, when only the church members gathered, at two o'clock, when Dea. Albert, wearing the black silk cap as a protection from the draughts which still sweep down from the gallery, pitched the tunes taken up by his sweet-faced and sweet-voiced wife and by his daughters and then by the congregation. Dea. and Mrs. Aiken sat once more in the family pew, Mrs. Tufts and the members of her household. The Smiths at the morning service, and in the afternoon, Mrs. Richardson and Mr. and Mrs. Torr. I saw Mrs. Richardson as she passed into her pew, drop into my mother's lap a bunch of the fragrant reddish brown strawberry blossoms, as, knowing my mother's fondness for the plant, she was accustomed to do when it was in bloom. I heard the Rev. Charles Smith preaching a sermon whose subject was, "On the Threshold of the Kingdom of Heaven," and heard myself saying to myself, "That means me," and at its close we sang that simple, appealing hymn—

Today the Saviour calls,
Oh, listen now;
Within these sacred walls
To Jesus bow."

We heard much in those days of "Behold, now is the accepted time, Behold, now is the day of salvation."

I have heard Mrs. Ripley say that as a girl of eighteen, she could not get away from the sermons of the Rev. George F. Moosar. We have all had that experience, as some of you have not got away and will not get away from the sermons of Mr. Shipman.

I am going to be personal this afternoon. We are one family and you need not be surprised to hear your name called out in meeting. If I do not mention all your names, it will be because Mr. Shipman did not give me the rest of the year to do it in.

On this two hundredth anniversary I am to take you back to the days when if a man fired off a gun on Abbot street he would kill at least one Abbot and one Holt, and to the time when the Abbots were so numerous that we all had to go by our front names—as witness the roll-call at Funchard: George Abbot, Hattie Abbot, Lizzie B. Abbot, Lizzie P. Abbot, Mary S. Abbot, and in my day, Helen Abbot, Ira Abbot, Martha Abbot, Mary Abbot, Newton Abbot, and among the married people, Mrs. Nathan B. and Mrs. Nathan F., Mrs. John B. and Mrs. Stephen B., Mrs. George L. and Mrs. Daniel B., and infinitum. An inquisitive old lady walking on Central street asked a little girl who lived in a certain house, she replied, "Mrs. John L." "Mrs. John L. How do you spell it?" "We don't spell it at all, it's just Mrs. John L."

Mention must be made of the Ladies' Charitable Society, the forerunner of the Women's Union, the society to which your mother and mine gave unstinted service, and toward whose annual meeting, held on election day to accommodate the men, our fathers having donned their best clothes, wended their way as a matter of course to have supper and a social time.

That annual meeting! The one event in the whole year! We children might be excluded from the monthly socials by the rule that "all children under fourteen," etc., but not from the annual meeting! We were there on time, and in force, and hung our heels on the rounds of the settees to keep our plates in our laps, and hungrily watched the waiters with the plates of sliced tongue and ham, and uttered fervent ejaculations of what we might get one of Miss Richardson's tarts, or a piece of a specially tempting George Washington or Booker Washington pie. We sometimes changed our seat when we found ourselves in a corner neglected by the waiters, and how we blessed some particularly sweet-faced lady with a tender heart for children, who filled our plates with the best in the land. But our chief delight was not the supper, hard as it may be to believe, but it was the race that we had afterwards up and down these back stairs into the dark and silent church. Now and then an extra bold boy ventured into the pulpit, but that was to the most of us a holy place, and our bump of reverence held us back. We felt that we were on forbidden ground, and that we deserved a horse-whipping, but we rather enjoyed the feeling, and up and down we raced until missed by the older people; then, the

These sicknesses may be slight at first, but they hinder work, prevent advancement or bring depression and spoil enjoyment. light streamed up the stairway and some one called us down. Breathless, we filed into the vestry, and excited, our only thought was to race and run. I can feel the restraining hand of my mother or some good lady of the church, on my shoulder as I was stopped in a mad career to catch some one, and was duly surprised that I was making a nuisance of myself. I have a fellow-feeling for the little chap or maiden on whom in these later years I have laid my restraining hand when people were in danger of being upset by their hilarity.

Later, having come to years of discretion, I recall the annual meeting as an afternoon of sewing, followed by the business meeting in the gloaming when the lights were lighted, and then the supper at which I officiated as waitress. There was no soliciting for food in those days. Every family was expected to bring certain things. Miss Susie Jones says they were depended upon for a can of milk, and bread, and the corners of the town which made rye bread brought it; for Dea. Gould must have his rye bread!

Shades of the Fathers! Imagine "Copenhagen" being the accepted game at a social, and "Tucker" forbidden! Tell that to the pessimist who believes the world is growing worse.

To our credit be it said that some of us stood afar off, and when solicited to start the young people at some other game, after looking at the young men huddled on a few settees on one side of the room, and the young women bunched together on the other, the young men fervently wishing they might bridge the chasm, and the young women casting frequent glances at the interesting creatures yonder, we "fell to" and they "fell in line" for "Twirl the Cover," "Stage Coach," "Jacob and Rachel," "Proverbs," and the like.

It was just as hard to make people social who knew nothing about each other then as it is today. I remember being one of a committee of five whose duty it was to introduce people and separate the wall flowers from the wall. We worked hard, introduced, stayed to chat a few moments, thinking the ice broken, passed to "pastures new," only to turn around in a few moments to find one or the other backed up against the wall again, and at the end of the evening we five sat down on a settee together, completely "tuckered out" with our attempts at sociability. People who were not willing to go half way, and expected the church people to do it all, called the South church stiff and cold, as some do today, but we never meant to be, never have been, never will be. Try us and see!

I must not forget the socials held in private houses, when either in private conveyances or in a barge, we drove to Dea. Ezekiah Jones's hospitable home, or to Dea. Nathan B. Abbott's, where we met such a genial welcome from the sweet-faced mother and daughter who long held office in the Ladies' Charitable Society.

I need only mention the socials held at Mr. Smith's, Mr. Laird's, Mr. Blair's, at the Ellises', at the Andrews', at Mrs. Benjamin Brown's, at Mrs. Ripley's, at Mrs. Solomon Higgins' to remind many of you of the good times that we had.

The Ladies' Charitable Society was formed in 1836. Its meetings were closed with reading of the Scripture and prayer, and this was usually by the pastor. Besides the customary officers, they had a board of directresses and a committee which arranged for reading aloud for one hour at the sewing meetings.

When this church was built, in 1860, the ladies, netting ten hundred dollars from a fair, carpeted the church, furnished the matings and lamps, the two pulpit chairs, the fittings for the ladies' parlor, and the carpet for the primary room, or the small vestry as it was then called.

During the Civil War our ladies worked for the soldiers.

Mrs. Henry, left a widow with a large family of children, was unable to attend the sewing meetings, but offered to knit as many stockings as the society would furnish the yarn for. She knit fifty pairs, though her daughter tells me that she was rather surprised at the furnishing power of the ladies.

The South Church always has risen to the occasion and always will!

I was interested in this item in the Ladies' Charitable records: "Contents of box sent to Co. H, Fort Albany, 14th Regiment: 17 bed-ticks, 11 comforters, 1 blanket, 23 pairs mittens, 3 packages of tracts. Valued $33.35."

When the vestries were renovated in the early 80's the ladies held another fair.

I note my mother's name on the Supper Committee with Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Marland and Miss Ellen Abbott. The chickens for the salad were cooked at our house and I remember that we sat around the kitchen table and watched Major Marland concoct the quarts and quarts of salad dressing, for he was an adept in that line.

I note my own name, with that of Miss Mary S. Abbott and Mr. Guttererson, in connection with the Post Office, an old-time feature of fairs.

A roguish Andover girl wrote a letter to a popular Academy boy, for there were Academy boys in those days, telling him that he would find a kiss under a certain plank in the boarding which surrounded the "town pump," and a cousin of mine recalls inquiring for mail and being told that there was a letter for her, paid her five cents and opened her letter and read:

"Oh, the angels sang for joy
When she was born!"

From this fair was netted sixteen hundred dollars, a result so surprising that one gentleman of the church remarked jokingly, "I wonder if the ladies made it honestly." The small vestry was re-carpeted, and how strict the rules were in regard to the use of that room. What would Miss Temple have said could she have foreseen that the primary department would later eat supper in that room!

I have recalled many this afternoon who made the interests of this church their own.

This church has a few things which have been given "in remembrance" of those who have worked here and gone beyond. In connection with our kitchen, a dinner wagon given by a son in memory of his mother; our communion table with its beautiful inscription, "This do in remembrance of Me," given by a daughter in memory of a father and mother; our offertory plates, by children in memory of a mother; our stained glass windows, given by Prof. Taylor in memory of his father, Dr. John L. Taylor, our former pastor, and of his mother, Mrs. Catherine Taylor.

What better tribute can we pay to father and mother, to grandfather and grandmother, uncle and aunt, brother and sister, than to make the interests of this church our own, and to work with an eye single to the glory of the Head of the Church, Christ, our Master and Redeemer.

I love thy church, O Lord,
Her walls before thee stand
Dear as the apple of thine eye,
And graven on thy hand.

The last speaker of the evening was Rev. George H. Guttererson of Winchester. Graphically he drew a picture of the two hundred years of the church's history, from the time of the landing of the Pilgrims through the settlement of Andover, the gradual upbuilding of the church, the trials and troubles through which the community passed from time to time, and its increase in prosperity, down to the present day. He closed with a wish for as earnest endeavor in the future as has characterized the past.

Prayer by Rev. Mr. Laird, a hymn, and benediction by Rev. Mr. Cummings, brought the service to a close.

The committees for the anniversary are as follows:

Methodist Day

The fine weather Sunday brought out a large attendance at the special "Methodist Day" at the local church. The day's services began at 10 o'clock with a genuine old fashioned Methodist Love Feast, at which the roll was called by the pastor, Rev. C. J. Mekleson, and a good fellowship meeting was enjoyed by all. The church history was read by Miss Florence Simpson. Quite a number of people from out of town, who had formerly been connected with the church, among them Charles H. Buckley, a prosperous furniture dealer of Lynn, who lived here 46 years ago and was converted in the church. Mr. Buckley, who has had considerable experience as a choir leader, sang two solos in a very impressive manner. Special music was furnished by a girls' chorus in the morning services, and by a ladies' quartet in the evening. Special rally day exercises were held in the Sunday School at which there was a large attendance. Rev. C. J. Mekleson, the popular pastor, preached an eloquent and inspiring sermon for the occasion. His topic was "Jesus, the Key to the Situation."

LYNCH-HAGGERTY

One of the prettiest weddings of the season occurred Wednesday afternoon at four o'clock at St. Joseph's church, when Mollie A. Haggerty, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Haggerty, became the bride of David J. Lynch of Alton Bay, N. H. The church was decorated with autumn leaves and flowers, and the ceremony was performed by Rev. Frederick Riordan of Andover.

The bride was becomingly attired in white brocaded lace over white satin, and wore a white veil caught up with lilies of the valley. She carried a large shower bouquet of bride roses and lilies of the valley.

The bride was attended by her friend, Miss Grace Heffernan, who wore a beautiful dress of pale blue crepe de chine over blue silk, with large white picture hat, and carried a bouquet of white roses. The best man was George D. Lynch of Alton, N. H., a brother of the groom. Chas. Lord, a cousin of the bride, and Timothy Haggerty, the bride's brother, acted as ushers at the church.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride on Andover street. A turkey supper was served to about one hundred guests, from five to eight o'clock, by Caterer Rhodes of Andover. The house was beautifully decorated with ferns, palms, and cut flowers. Music was furnished by the U. S. M. C. orchestra from Beverly.

The bride is a very popular young lady of this town, and was employed as a stenographer for the commission house of Messrs. Lawrence & Co. of Boston. The groom is a popular young man of Alton Bay, N. H.

They were the recipients of many costly and beautiful presents. Mr. and Mrs. Lynch departed later in the evening in an automobile for Glendale, N. H., where they will spend their honeymoon, and will be at home to friends after November 1st, at their newly-furnished home in Manchester, N. H.

Andover Has Slight Lead

The tournaments between the Andover and North Andover clubs started last night in the local club rooms and resulted in a victory for the Andover men with a slight margin of one point. The score was 7 to 6.

There were many interesting contests during the evening, and the result of the meet was in doubt until the last match was played. In bowling, the points were divided, each team winning two. With a good lead on two strings, the Andover men struck a snag and North Andover came back strong, winning the third string and the total.

In whist, North Andover took two and one-half points to Andover's one-half point, the former club taking the largest number of tables and tying on the total points.

Andover won all the points in billiards, Dr. Hulme and Weeks both playing strong games and finishing far in the lead of their opponents. Clark won his pool game with a good margin, and Hilton lost, although he put up a splendid fight.

At the close of the games Caterer Rhodes served refreshments. The score:

SUFFRAGISTS LOSE IN GOLDEN STATE

California Apparently Adopts All Other Amendments

San Francisco, Oct. 12.—Woman suffrage was defeated in California by 8000 votes. Outside of this city the women won by 6000, but this margin was overcome in San Francisco, where 12,073 majority was rolled up against the measure.

It is practically conceded that the recall of all elective officers, including the judiciary, and the initiative and referendum, has won by at least 4 to 1, and that all the other reform measures have received the stamp of popular approval.

STRUNG UP BY ONE FOOT

Young Negro Captured and Lynched After Sensational Chase

Greenville, N. C., Oct. 12.—Willie Jackson, a 17-year-old negro, who assaulted an 11-year-old girl at Honea Path, was strung to a telephone pole by one foot and his body shot to pieces by a mob. The lynching took place at 11:25 o'clock at night.

Following a sensational man-chase in automobiles extending over 100 miles, a mob overpowered the sheriff and his deputies six miles north of Greenville and secured the negro.

The machine bearing the negro broke down after leaving this city and the party concealed themselves in the woods. On returning to the city the chauffeur who drove the party was seized by the mob and forced to show them to the spot where the negro was concealed.

MISTAKEN FOR A DEER

Guide Did Not Respond to Hunter's Whistle and Is Killed

Bingham, Me., Oct. 9.—Mistaken for a deer by the man whom he was guiding through the woods near the base of Mosquito mountain, Harold Hight of Bingham, aged 26, was shot and killed.

He and Dr. Brooks of New York started out from camp near Lake Umbagog with the understanding that if either saw a deer he was to whistle to the other. Brooks thought he saw one and whistled. No answer came and he fired. The bullet struck the guide in the back of the neck, and he died shortly afterward.

Dr. Brooks has visited this section annually for years. The fatality was the first of the fall hunting season, which opened Oct. 1.
